Childrens story for the day

A fox passed by a grapevine winding around the branches of a tree. He saw a bunch of grapes hanging above. He jumped to snatch some grapes. But the grapes were too high for him. "You have to grow up fox," said a monkey living on the tree; "here take some grapes." The monkey shook the branch and a few grapes fell out. The fox caught them neatly in his mouth. "Are they sweet?" asked the monkey. "Not so sweet," the fox said as he walked away. The next day, the fox came by the tree again. He took a look at the bunches of grapes hanging above. He took a short run and jumped. This time he could jump higher, but not high enough to get at the grapes. The friendly monkey pressed down the branch, helping the fox snatch one or two grapes as they fell. "Is it sweet?" asked the monkey. "Not so sweet," said the fox as he walked away. The next day, the fox was back. This time he looked determined to get the grapes.
